Title	Intellectual Property Rights protection
Last update/check	30/07/2010
Sector	Horizontal
Measure	Enforcement problems on IPR
Third Country	Russian Federation
Description	Despite a stable legislative regime, numerous problems continue to hinder an effective intellectual property rights protection in Russia, in particular in terms of law enforcement. Russia has so far not succeeded in preventing the mass replication of pirate optical disks on its territory. The pirate disks saturate the local market and are exported to the EU and neighbouring countries. DVD production lines are in over-capacity, in excess of the needs of the Russian market. Most of the thirty facilities producing optical discs are known to produce pirate products. Large-scale production of counterfeit software in the form of low-quality CD-ROMs is also noted. It is impossible to conduct an effective confiscation of equipment used for illegal copying. Internet piracy remains of great concern. Low fines and the absence of the possibility to take actions against infringers result in a general lack of prevention policy. The situation is exacerbated by the unwillingness of law enforcement agencies to take legal action against Internet pirates. Sale and use of counterfeited trademarks of clothes, luxury products, pharmaceuticals, and of illegal software, music and films are widespread and take place both in street markets and in mainstream retail. Furthermore, systematic infringements of patents, commercial secrets and know-how in innovative sectors such as pharmaceuticals, chemicals, mechanical engineering and ICT jeopardise the EU's competitiveness. There is also systematic misappropriation of intellectual property rights, in that companies or individuals obtain patents for alleged inventions, or registering trademarks that are identical or strikingly similar to the trademarks of foreign companies. The establishment of the Customs Union between Russia, Kazakhstan and Belarus on 1 January 2010 brought a considerable risk of further weakening of enforcement and of diminishing protection of trademarks. The risk is linked to the weak IPR regime in Kazakhstan, whose porous borders allow for entry of counterfeited goods and for illegitimate parallel imports from Asian countries, China notably. There are concerns that insufficient IPR training of Kazakh customs officials will inhibit effective IPR protection, in particular if the Single Economic Space regime enters into force as envisaged for January 2012.
Background	Art. 54 and Annex 10 of the Partnership and Cooperation Agreement commit Russia to ensure a level of IPR protection similar to that of the Community, including an effective rights' enforcement by 1 January 2003. In addition, Russia confirmed its intention to apply the WTO TRIPs Agreement from the date of its accession to the WTO. So far Russia has not met the standards set out in PCA and in the TRIPs, in particular in relation to enforcement.
Actions Taken	IPR enforcement continues to be raised in the context of Russia's WTO accession negotiations. The Commission has also engaged in a regular bi-annual IPR Dialogue (involving the relevant stakeholders) with the enforcing authorities to resolve IPR problems. This Dialogue has proven very useful and Russian authorities have also engaged in wide scale cooperation activities concerning the IPR enforcement, which is a positive step. The Commission has also, together with the copyright industry, organised a number of training events on Internet piracy through the TAIEX scheme addressed to various enforcement agencies, including the State Judicial Academy and the General Prosecutors Office. In addition, the EU Delegation organised in April 2010 a round table on parallel imports and trademark protection with the Federal Customs Service and stakeholders.

the sanitary and phytosanitary export database

In recent years the number of problems encountered by EU Member States exporting animals, products of animal origin, plants and plant products due to Sanitary and Phytosanitary measures applied by third countries continues to grow. To bring more transparency in the situation and to optimize the efforts to resolve these issues, the Commission has established the SPS export database.

The information contained in this database has been provided by the agro-food industry, Member States, EC Delegations in Third Countries, Commission Services, and SPS notifications from the WTO.

Barrier fiche detail

Title	Import permits for products of animal origin
Last update/check	09/02/2011
Barrier id	115384
Sector	Agriculture and Fisheries
SPS measure	Animal health reasons
Country	Ukraine
Description of the measure	Import permits, required for animal products, are pending and procedures for application and issuance are not clear. Permits may cover only a very limited period, and it is not clear for which products and in which circumstances these import permits are required. Furthermore, it is not clear when products are considered to be "new" products, thus requiring a permit.
Background	As of 1 January 2009, regionally issued of import permits for products of animal origin have been withdrawn, and new permits are issued only at the central office of the State Committee of Veterinary Medicine of Ukraine. This was informed by the Chief State Inspector of Veterinary Medicine of Ukraine in a letter dated 15 June 2010, #15-3-1-3/5107. According to exporters, this organisational arrangement has created barriers to trade, as permits are pending longer than the maximum of 30 days laid down in the Art. 83 of the Law of Ukraine "On Veterinary Medicine" currently in force. Consequently, import permits, required for animal products, are pending and procedures for application and issuance are not clear. Permits may cover only a very limited period, and it is not clear for which products and in which circumstances these import permits are required. Furthermore, it is not clear when products are considered to be "new" products, thus requiring a permit.
Barrier Status	Ongoing
Actions Taken	European Commission has repeatedly addressed the issue of pending applications and the unclear procedures with Ukrainian authorities. Clarification of this, as well as the technical justification on which it is based, and Ukraine's risk assessment based on science for application of this specific sanitary measure has been requested, as according to Ukraine's obligations under the WTO-SPS Agreement.
